

Bloomberg Terminal Use Agreement

This agreement is between me and the Rhodes Center for International Economics and Finance at Brown University. Brown licenses Bloomberg terminals and data from Bloomberg and makes them available for research and student projects.

In this agreement, “Terminals” means the Bloomberg terminals that Brown provides, and “Bloomberg Data” means any data or content obtained from them or from other Bloomberg services, including any portion I copy into other files. By signing below, I agree to abide by the following terms whenever I use the Terminals or Bloomberg Data.

- 1. No sharing outside Brown. I will not disclose, transmit, or otherwise make Bloomberg Data available to any person or service outside Brown University, by any means, including email, Dropbox, or any other file-sharing service.
- 2. Work on the Terminals. I will access and analyze Bloomberg Data only on the Terminals themselves (the physical PCs).
- 3. Permitted disclosures. The following are not disclosure outside Brown under Term 1: (a) analysis, results, and data that I derive from Bloomberg Data, so long as they do not contain raw Bloomberg Data beyond what is reasonably needed to present the analysis; (b) personal backups, on physical media or a cloud backup service, of the minimum raw Bloomberg Data necessary to replicate my analysis; and (c) raw Bloomberg Data submitted to Brown instructors as part of a course assignment.

This agreement takes effect when I sign it, and the Rhodes Center accepts it by giving me access to the Terminals. No countersignature by the Rhodes Center or Brown University is required.
