

Wind Terminal Use Agreement

This agreement is between me and the Rhodes Center for International Economics and Finance at Brown University. Brown licenses Wind data terminal and data from Wind and makes them available for research and student projects.

In this agreement, “Terminal” means the Wind terminal that Brown provides, and “Wind Data” means any data or content obtained from them or from other Wind services, including any portion I copy into other files. By signing below, I agree to abide by the following terms whenever I use the Terminals or Wind Data.

- 1. No sharing outside Brown. I will not disclose, transmit, or otherwise make Wind Data available to any person or service outside Brown University, by any means, including email, Dropbox, or any other file-sharing service.
- 2. Work on the Terminals. I will access and analyze Wind Data only on the Terminals themselves (the physical PCs).
- 3. Permitted disclosures. The following are not disclosure outside Brown under Term 1: (a) analysis, results, and data that I derive from Wind Data, so long as they do not contain raw Wind Data beyond what is reasonably needed to present the analysis; (b) personal backups, on physical media or a cloud backup service, of the minimum raw Wind Data necessary to replicate my analysis; and (c) raw Wind Data submitted to Brown instructors as part of a course assignment.

This agreement takes effect when I sign it, and the Rhodes Center accepts it by giving me access to the Terminal. No countersignature by the Rhodes Center or Brown University is required.
